he company on Intrastate passenger vusiness in Virginia for the year ended fune 30, 1905, which witness had admitted was done at a proft.

Mr. Cocke contended that a rate made so low on freight as to require the company to haul it at a loss could not be ustified on the ground that the company was doing another class of its business t a profit.

To Test Accuracy, it. Braxton replied, and contended to for the purposes of testing the accuracy of the figures submitted as to the restate business in Virginia, and socrating whether the freight business is ually done at a loss, the passanger siness should be taken into account, did not wish to force the company do one class of its business at a loss ause it was doing another at a profit, the wished to have the data asked for, ruling was asked for, but for the sent the statistics were not forthming.

of this amount had been collected from its of this amount had been consected from its patrons. It took a long time to get the matter straightened out, but finally the witness said no railroad could operate without a working capital.

He said further that his company usually had a fund of some three or four millions of dollars on hand for this purpose.

"Was there ever a time," he was asked, "when your collections were not some-what ahead of your expenses?"
"I should say as a general proposition, that the collections are usually ahead."

Had a Hard Time.

Mr. Braxton was trying to hammer out of the witness the admission that in apportioning the burdens of the company the net, and not the gross, earnings should be taken as the basis, but he could not get him to say so. He contended that the gross earnings was the proper basis, as there might not be any net earnings. t earnings. The witness stoutly stuck to this contention, though the lawyer held him on the point for a long time. Witness was asked if he did not use the gross earnings as the basis for ap-portioning the taxes to Virginia intra-state business, as well as for assigning other burdens, and he answered in the other burdens, and he answered in the affirmative.

About 5 o'clock Mr. Braxton started back over his voluminous notes, asking further questions on various subjects, and he brought a smile from his very courteous competitor. Mr. Cocke, by announcing that he was quite sure he would get through with the witness before the end of the day's session.

A loud clap of thunder came shortly afterwards, and Mr. Braxton said, amid the smiles of all: "I think we should adjourn. I don't want the end of the world to come with all these railroad men sitting around me." He proceeded, however, when a calm followed, not seeming to foar the railroad attorneys under ordinary conditions.

The examination of Mr. Coxe was completed at 5:30, and Traffic Manager Davant, of the Norfolk and Western, will go on to-day,

City Attorney C. L. Page to Pass Upon Free Bridge Ordinance.

DR. GARNETT LAID TO REST

Impressive: Funeral Services Over Body of Aged Physician. Personals and Briefs.

At the meeting of the Ordinance Committee to be held in the Council Chamber to-night, City Attorney Charles L. Page will give his opinion regarding the legality of the ordinance providing for the Issuance of honds for the erection of a free bridge on the Mayo's Bridge site. The question of the technical logality of the proposed ordinance was referred to Mr. Page, which as yet has not intimated what his opinion will be. In the event, however, that he thinks the plan foasible, and that the city will be sare in the issuance of the bonds—about $250,000 worth—the matter will likely come to the attention of the City Assembly on Friday night, and will there be thoroughly aired.

Alderman B. M. Robertson, of the Fourth Ward, is the patron of the ordinance which seeks to build a bridge neross James River, where the Mayo's Bridge now stands. Mr. Robertson believes that the huilding of the bridge now stands. Mr. Robertson believes that the huilding of the bridge will be of great bonefit to Manchester and that it will add a great deal to the proposition to annex the two cities.

urer Hechler.

The question as to whether or not the county treasurer or the Board of Supervisors will be the custodian of the county bonds for the orection of a new lail one that will be aired before Judge R. Carter Scott, of the Henrico Circuit Count. The bonds—$50,000 worth—were Issued in January and were at once bought by the Bhak of Richmond. The money is now deposited in the bank, and the Board of Supervisors of the county has the control of it.

County Treasurer H. C. Healter believes that his bond to the county makes him responsible for this bond issue, and that he should be the custodian of the funds.

Judge Scott's attention was called to the matter yesterday, but he would not discuss it, inasmuch as it will lakely be brought to his attention in court, and he will have to pass upon the technical below.

Commonwealth's Artificial to Question was purely a technical one, and that it would not affect the work whether the bond issue was under the control of the supervisors or the county treasurer.
